Between Safari and Google Chrome, I didn't spot any inconsistencies for the display. Both successfully displayed my primary form, Georgia, for the text and loaded all colors & images that I coded. Looking at them side by side in the screenshot, the header looks a little shorter vertically in the Safari version, but that could be because I was more scrolled up than I was on the version I had open in Chrome. Overall both the css and html translated successfully and there were no disparities between the browsers.
